

DATA Partners,

DATA has had a big year welcoming several new partners and tackling new challenges. DATA relies on its partnerships to build effective and comprehensive responses to identifying and supporting victims and holding traffickers accountable. Thank you for your ongoing work in serving our community.

The mission of the Denver Anti-Trafficking Alliance (DATA) is to further develop a victim-centered, multidisciplinary, multi-sector response to human trafficking in the Denver metro area through collaboration; support of trauma-informed services and organizations; collaborative investigations and prosecution; education and awareness; and public policy and advocacy.

DATA includes more than 70 organizations and agencies addressing human trafficking in Denver.

DATA has an Advisory Committee, holds quarterly meetings, and operates six sector-specific subcommittees that meet regularly: Healthcare, Mental Health, Housing, Juvenile Multidisciplinary Team, Law Enforcement, and the Crime Victim Service Committee. If you are interested in more information or joining, please contact data@denverda.org or visit www.denveralliance.org

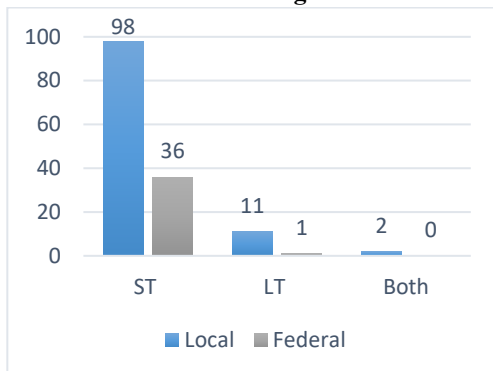

The below data is collected for the Enhanced Collaborative Model (ECM) task force grant and reported to the Department of Justice.

Collaboration Spotlight: Clark Case

In May of 2023, Randall Clark pled guilty to first-degree assault, human trafficking, and attempt to commit sexual assault on a child. He was sentenced to 45 years in the Department of Corrections.

Over the course of several years, Clark used various methods, including manipulation, physical violence, threats, and exploitation of drug addiction to identify and control his victims for financial gain. His victims experienced complex trauma resulting in chronic health conditions and PTSD symptoms.

Supporting these victims in their recovery required immense support from service provider partners and advocates. Organizations such as, From Silenced to Saved (FSTS) met the emergency and ongoing needs of the victims throughout their recovery and the lengthy legal process. Victims were provided various support including mentorship, school assistance, substance abuse treatment and mental health services. Victim advocates and FSTS walked alongside the survivors ensuring they were prepared to share their story with the grand jury and that their voices were heard.

Law enforcement agencies, including Denver DA, Boulder DA, Denver PD, Louisville PD, and Longmont PD, and Boulder County Sheriff's office, were involved in the extensive investigation and prosecution of this trafficker. A plea was granted after conferring with Clark's victims, which allowed them to avoid testifying in front of their trafficker.

The success of this case highlights the importance of collaboration between law enforcement and service providers when seeking justice while ensuring that cases are survivor centered.
